Headline:
Generally quite cloudy with rain arriving later.

Today:
Rather cloudy but remaining dry for most with some sunny spells, especially further east. Chance of a few drizzly showers from time to time. Becoming breezier in coastal locations through the day, with patchy rain arriving into the west later. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Tonight:
A band of rain will move across the country through the evening with rain becoming heavier and widespread overnight. Remaining breezy at coastal locations. Minimum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Saturday:
The morning will start with widespread, locally heavy rain affecting much of the country. It will then turn showery from the west with possible thundery downpours. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Turning drier Sunday with some sunny spells and just a few showers. Becoming much more settled into next week, with dry conditions and sunny spells. Feeling warm in any sunshine.
